

4402 12
A BRIEF

EXHORTATION

TO THE

Holy Communion.

WITH THE

NATURE and MEASURE

OF

PREPARATION

Concerning it.

Fitted to the meanest Capacities.

By WILLIAM ASSHETON, D.D.

Late Rector of Beckenham in Kent, and Chaplain to his Grace
the Duke of ORMOND.

L O N D O N:

Printed for JOHN RIVINGTON, Bookseller to
The Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, at the Bible and Crown (N^o 62.) in St Paul's Church-yard. 1775.

[Price 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. or 10s. a Hundred.]

EXHIBITION

High Commission

PREPARATION

Printed by J. G. & Co. 10, St. Martin's Lane, London, W.C. 2.

H
Da
ser ba cer
you men

TO THE INHABITANTS

Of the PARISH of

Beckenham in KENT.

*H*AVING given you directions in some former papers, not only for your Daily Devotion, but also how to observe and sanctify the Lord's Day; I shall next proceed to instruct you concerning the Holy Communion; how you may comfortably receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

5/2

But before I attempt that task (so great is the Neglect of this holy Institution) I find it necessary to admonish you of your duty in these two instances.

1. To convince you that you are obliged frequently to receive this holy Sacrament.

2. To instruct you in the nature and measure of that preparation which is required of all worthy Communicants. And this I shall attempt, for the sake of some honest well-meaning people, who are afraid to come to the Lord's Table, because (as they fancy) they are not duly qualified and prepared.

The measures of which preparation I shall better explain, when I have first given you this brief account of the nature of that Sacrament.

THE INSTITUTION

OF THE HOLY COMMUNION.

THE institution of the Lord's Supper is recorded by four of the sacred writers, namely, St Matthew, St Mark, St Luke, and St Paul. The sum of what they have delivered concerning it, is thus fully collected by the Church of England, in the prayer of Consecration.

“ The Lord Jesus in the same (a) night in “ which he was betrayed, took (b) bread, and “ when he had given (c) thanks, he (d) brake
“ it and gave it to his (e) disciples; (f) say“ ing

(a) 1 Cor. xi. 23.

(b) Matt. xxvi. 26.

Mark xiv. 22. Luke

xxii. 19.

(c) Luke xxii. 19.—

1 Cor. xi. 24.

(d) Matt. xxvi. 26.

Mark xiv. 22. Luke

xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24.

(e) Matt. xxvi. 26.

(f) Luke xxii. 19.

"ing, (g) Take, eat, this is my body, which
 "is (h) given for you, (i) Do this in remem"brance of me. Likewise after (k) Supper he "took the (l) cup, and when he had given
 "(m) thanks, he gave it to them; (n) saying,
 "(o) Drink ye all of this, (p) for (q) this is
 "my blood of the New Testament, which is
 "shed for (r) you, and for (s) many, (t) for
 "the remission of sins: (u) Do this, as oft
 "as ye shall drink it, in remembrance of me."

From these words of the holy penmen, it plainly appears; That our blessed Saviour
 Jesus Christ being immediately to suffer death upon the cross, (by which death he was to make a full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world) he did then institute, and command us (by receiving bread and wine) "to "continue a perpetual memory of that his pre"cious death until his coming again."

So

(g) Matt. xxvi. 27.
 Mark xiv. 22. 1 Cor.
 xi. 24.

(h) Luke xxii. 19.

(i) Luke xxii. 19.—
 1 Cor. xi. 24.

(k) Luke xxii. 20.—
 1 Cor. xi. 25.

(l) Matt. xxvi. 27.
 Mark xiv. 23. Luke xxii.
 20. 1 Cor. xi. 25.

(m) Matt. xxvi. 27.
 Mark xiv. 23.

(n) Matt. xxvi. 27.

(o) Matt. xxvi. 27.

(p) Matt. xxvi. 28.

(q) Matt. xxvi. 28.

Mark xiv. 24. Luke xxii:
 20. 1 Cor. xi. 25.

(r) Luke xxii. 20.

(s) Matt. xxvi. 28.

Mark xiv. 24.

(t) Matt. xxvi. 28.

(u) 1 Cor. xi. 25.

So that this institution of our Saviour is as formal a command to do what he then did, as any words can express.

It is impossible for any law to be more peremptory and obliging. Neither Prayer, nor Preaching, nor the observation of the Lord's Day, which all acknowledge to be necessary duties, are more plainly required; than, "Take, eat, this is my body.—Drink ye all of this. This do in remembrance of me."

Now that ye may give a more chearful obedience to this established law, and that this command may make its due impression upon you, I shall desire you to consider,

I. Who it is that commands this.

It is our blessed Lord and Saviour, who hath full power and authority so to do; and that in every respect. Not only as God, [He made us, and preserves us; and so hath just power over the works of his own hands;] but as God-man, as our Mediator and Redeemer, he hath bought us, [hath paid a most valuable price for us, even his own precious blood;] and so we are his by purchase. He hath redeemed us out of the hands of our enemies, and so we are his by conquest. And why are we thus purchased and redeemed? Is it to be our own masters, and do what we list? No: "Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's," 1 Cor. vi. 19, 20. And "that being delivered

“ out of the hands of your enemies, ye might “ serve him without fear, in holiness and right“ teousness before him all the days of your “ life.” Luke i. 7, 8.

But now, How are we his servants? And how do we honour him as our master? How do we glorify him in our bodies and spirits, if we take no notice of his commands?

2. When was it that he thus commanded.

It was (St Paul tells you) “ the same night
“ in which he was betrayed, that Jesus took “ bread; and when he had given thanks, he “ brake it, and said, Take, eat, this is my “ body which is broken for you: This do in “ remembrance of me,” 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24.

It was when he was preparing to die in our stead, and to offer up himself a Sacrifice for us; Then it was that he did institute this Sacrament; and by breaking of bread, and drinking of wine, did command us “ to con“ tinue a perpetual memory of that his pre“ cious death until his coming again.”

Now the words of dying men, you know, are sacred, and do usually make great impression upon us. And to deny the last request of any person, though otherwise a stranger [supposing it proper and fit for us to grant] is looked upon as a rude and barbarous practice.
But to refuse some easy requests of a dying friend, who hath not only been a great support and comfort to us all the time of his life, but hath also bequeathed us a considerable estate

estate at his death; such neglect as this were a monstrous ingratitude.

What therefore shall we think of those that forget their dying Lord; and who will not remember his death, that gave them life? And who desires no more from us, but only that we will remember this his love, and behave ourselves with a dutiful affection to him. To refuse such a command as this, so easy as well as just, not to remember his kindness who died for our sakes, is so base and dangerous, it is such a dreadful aggravation of our disobedience and contempt, that I want a name to express it; especially when we consider,

3. What it is that is required of us, when we are commanded, ^{ss} Do this in remembrance of me.^{ss}

Now there are two things commanded; the one expressed, the other implied.

1. To make a grateful commemoration of his death and passion.

2. To partake of all those benefits and blessings which are the effects and consequents of such a remembrance.

The first general command is, the remembrance of Christ: ^{ss} This do in remembrance ^{ss} of me.^{ss}

It is the noted practice of all civilized nations, to celebrate the memory of their public benefactors. Surely you will then grant, That the blessed Jesus, the greatest benefactor that ever was, is never to be forgotten by us Christians ; but that it is our constant indispensable duty, by eating this bread, and drinking this cup, to shew forth the Lord's death till he come ; that is, as the word καταγγιλλετε signifies, to publish, and tell it abroad : to profess and declare to all the world, that Christ died for you, and that he purchased you by his blood ; and that you now own him to be your Lord, and profess yourselves to be his servants ; and that you will be ruled and governed by him, and do what he commands you. In short ; by the receiving of the Sacrament, you publickly profess your Religion, and declare yourselves to be Christians.

2. When you come to the Lord's Table, you do not barely remember the death and passion of your blessed Saviour ; but you then also come to receive all those benefits and blessings, which are the effects and consequents of such a remembrance. For this institution of the Lord's Supper, is a privilege and blessing, as well as a duty.

Indeed, earthly parents and masters do often command their children and servants pro imperio. Such a thing shall be done, though otherwise perhaps of no great moment, because it is their pleasure. And the most rational objection to the contrary shall be silenced, with a know your duty, and--I will be obeyed. But such is the indulgence of our Lord ; such is the gracious disposition of our Master ; he never never commands us any thing, but it is for our advantage: Do this and live; Do this and be happy; is the constant language of his precepts. Let us therefore, for our instruction and comfort, more distinctly consider, what particular blessings are conveyed by that holy institution.

All which are contained in this general expression, "of being partakers of his most blessed body and blood;" which, as the Church Catechism instructs us, "are verily and indeed taken and received by the faithful in the Lord's Supper:" that is, all the faithful; all who are duly prepared and disposed, they are real partakers, they have a real part and portion given them in the death and sufferings of the Lord Jesus. They do truly and indeed partake of the virtue of his sacrifice, whereby he hath obtained eternal redemption for us. And this certainly is the meaning of those words of St Paul, 1 Cor. x. 16. "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" that is, By eating this bread and drinking this cup, we do not only declare our communion and fellowship with the Church; but we have also communion with Christ himself. We communicate and partake of his body and blood; that is, all the effects and benefits of his death and passion are imparted and conveyed to us. And what these blessings more particularly are, the Liturgy of our church, in the prayers after the communion, doth thus plainly instruct you.

That those who have duly received these holy mysteries, and are fed with the spiritual food of the most precious body and blood of Jesus Christ; “ They obtain remission of their “ sins, and are filled with God’s grace, and “ heavenly benediction; they are assured of “ God’s favour and goodness towards them;
“ they are very members incorporate in
“ the mystical body of Christ; and also heirs
“ through hope of his everlasting kingdom.”

Having given this brief account of the Nature of this Sacrament; I now proceed in all faithfulness, to admonish you of your neglect; by shewing how dangerous it is to absent yourselves from the Lord’s Table: and in order to your conviction, I shall desire your answer to two plain questions.

1. Whether the wilful continuance in any one known sin, is not a damning state; and consequently, such a state wherein there is no salvation?

The Apostle exhorts you to examine yourselves whether you are in the faith: whether you are in a state of grace or no: and you are fully convinced, that it is absolutely necessary so to do. But when it comes to the trial, I have just cause to fear, you content yourselves with very false signs and imperfect marks.

It is very common for men pretending Religion to make such reflections as these: "What a sad, wicked, debauched age, do we live in: What a litter of idle, swearing, drinking, whoring companions, are amongst us:" All this is too sadly true. But what then?

Observe now what tacit inference is made from this remark.

"But I am no such man; I am no swearer; I am no drunkard; I am no whoremonger," &c. All this is very well; and thank God for his restraining grace, that you are not. But what then? "Therefore I am a Saint. Therefore I am in God's favour. Therefore I am in a state of grace." No such matter. This is but the Pharisee's Religion. "God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this Publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess." And yet your blessed Saviour assures you; "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."

When therefore you do enter upon this great work of self-examination, do not take your measures either from yourselves or other men. Do not say, or think, "I am not so bad as such and such a man. Or, I am not so bad as I myself was in former times; and therefore, I am in a regenerate state." No! No! This is a very false and imperfect rule.

For there are other sins besides fornication, and those deadly sins now mentioned; such as “pride, vainglory, and hypocrisy; envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness. Sedition, privy conspiracy, and rebellion; false doctrine, heresy, and schism; hardness of heart, and contempt of God’s word and commandments.” An obstinate continuance in any one of these, as well as swearing and drinking, is a state of damnation: and therefore in examining your spiritual state and condition, I know no rule you can depend upon but this:

That, An hearty, honest endeavour of obeying the whole will of God, is the only sure and true sign of a state of grace. And therefore, whoever doth knowingly and wilfully neglect to obey the whole will of God; that is, he who doth wilfully continue in any one known sin; such a man is not in a state of grace; and consequently not in a state of salvation. This being granted, as it cannot be denied, I inquire,

2. Whether to neglect a plain command of Christ, is not wilfully to continue in a known sin?

To inforce this, I must desire you to consider, that there are two sorts of sin: of commission and omission.

Sins of commission, are the doing such things as God hath forbidden; as to kill, to lie, to steal, to swear, &c.

Sins

Sins of omission, are the neglecting to do those things which God hath commanded. As “not to call upon God; not to honour his holy name and his word; not to come to church; not to join in publick prayer; not to hear sermons,” &c. All these are sins of omission. And pray, Whether is not this institution of the Lord’s Supper as express a command as any of the rest? Consequently, to neglect this holy Sacrament, Is it not to be guilty of a wilful sin? And whosoever continues in any one known sin, such a man, I have shewed you, is in a state of damnation.

I beseech you seriously to consider these things, which are so very plain and evident, that it is impossible for the meanest capacity not to apprehend them. In short, “damnation is for wilful sins. Wilful sins are sins deliberately committed against a known law. And if there be any such thing as a known law amongst Christians, this certainly is one; that they ought to receive the holy Sacrament.” The command is peremptory and express, “This do in remembrance of me.” Why then will you not do it? What excuses can possibly be made, why you will not observe so plain a command?

To omit the objections of the schismatical and profane, there are several honest well-meaning people, who thus pretend to excuse their absence from the Lord’s Table.

OBJECTION.

O B J E C T I O N.

“WE are fully convinced it is a duty
 “ to receive this Sacrament. But “ who are those who ought to receive it? Is “ it not those who have the wedding-gar“ ment? that is, are qualified and prepared,
 “ But as for us, we are a labouring, work“ ing people, who have no leisure to examine “ ourselves, or to spend whole days or weeks
 “ in fasting and prayer.

“ Is it not therefore much safer for us to “ honour the Sacrament by keeping at a due “ distance; than, by coming unprepared, to “ eat and drink our own damnation?”

This is the objection of many honest well-disposed People; whose satisfaction I shall endeavour in the following

A N S W E R.

IT is a noted Truth (sufficiently vindicated by the reformers against the Church of Rome) that religious duties do neither confer grace, nor find acceptance with God ex opere
operato; that is, by the bare doing of the work;
 for external acts of worship (such as “ prayer,
 “ reading of the scriptures, hearing of sermons, “ participating of the sacrament)” they do not work by way of charm, but in a rational and moral way. And though the efficacy of them is derived from the divine institution and blessing;
 yet that blessing is only conveyed to those persons

sons who are duly qualified and disposed to receive it.

It will therefore be a very profitable undertaking, distinctly to inform you, what kind of preparation is necessary, in order to the worthy receiving of this holy Sacrament. That is, what you must do; how you must behave yourselves, that so you may be accepted as welcome guests at the Lord's Table.

To explain the matter distinctly to you, I must remind you of a twofold preparation. Or rather to speak more properly, that this preparation doth admit of a twofold consideration.

I. INTERNAL.

2. EXTERNAL

By internal preparation, I denote the obtaining and practising those inward graces, whereby the soul doth shew its dependence upon, and relation to God: as "faith, hope, love, charity, sorrow for sins past, and resolution of future obedience," &c.

By external preparation, I denote those external acts of worship, those outward duties, whereby this inward piety and devotion of the soul in the exercise of the forementioned graces, is expressed and cherished: as "prayer, reading the holy Scriptures, and other pious books; hearing of Sermons, private meditation, self-examination, holy conference with others, &c.

Now preparation for the holy Communion supposes both these.

1. The soul of a worthy communicant must be furnished with divine virtues and graces.

2. These graces must be exercised and improved.

The former is the getting oil in our lamps; the latter is the trimming and dressing our lamps.

The getting oil in our lamps, or grace into our Souls, is the work of our whole lives; and must not be deferred to the times and seasons of receiving the Sacrament.

But the trimming of our lamps, or the exercise and strengthening of our graces, by a solemn performance of certain outward duties, as "prayer, serious consideration of the "mysterious love of God, expressed and presented to us in this holy Institution, reading "of the Scriptures, and other books of devotion; communing with our own hearts in "self-examination;" and (for the better performance of these, and such like duties) "the "sequestering of ourselves from secular business, and the retiring from the noise and
"hurry of the world:" I say, a solemn performance of these duties, immediately before we approach the Lord's Table, is that which we vulgarly call preparation for the holy Communion.

Concerning which preparation (to avoid mistakes, and to quiet the minds of honest well-well-meaning, but weak and injudicious people) I shall premise these following considerations.

1. That in a strict and legal sense, the most solemn preparation of the holiest Person is utterly unworthy of the divine favour and acceptance.

It is an insufferable insolence for finite creatures, wretched polluted sinners, to pretend any merit or worthiness of their own to a pure and holy God. We are not worthy of the common mercies even of this life, much less of those spiritual mercies which prepare us for a better. We are not worthy of our daily bread, much less of that bread which came down from heaven. And therefore our Church doth very excellently thus instruct us, to acknowledge our unworthiness before we presume to eat of that bread and drink of that cup.

“ We do not presume to come to this thy “ Table, O merciful Lord, trusting in our “ own righteousness, but in thy manifold and “ great mercies. We are not worthy so “ much as to gather up the crumbs under “ thy Table.”

And in one of the prayers after the communion, the communicants do thus address themselves unto God ;

“ Although

“ Although we be unworthy, through our “ manifold sins, to offer unto thee any “ sacrifice, yet we beseech thee to accept “ this our bounden duty and service; not “ weighing our merits, but pardoning our “ offences.”

From whence you may observe, That the most holy Persons, when they approach the Lord's Table, do then humbly acknowledge that they are utterly unworthy of so great a Blessing. After all our care, after all our preparation to qualify ourselves, we must acknowledge, that we are unworthy to pick up the crumbs that fall from our Master's Table; but much more unworthy to feast at it.

2. Though the best and most solemn preparation is imperfect, yet the holy Communicant must never omit it. Though he dares not be so confident as to be proud of his preparation, nor to challenge acceptance upon that account, yet he must not be so rude and undutiful as to neglect it.

St Paul doth admonish; “ Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup,” 1 Cor. xi. 28.

3. Though this preparation is so necessary, that we must not presume to approach the Lord's

Lord's Table without some preceding preparation, yet it is very difficult to assign the measures of it, so as precisely to determine how much time must be spent in these private preparatory duties. How much, for instance, in prayer, how much in reading, how much in meditation, how much in self-examination, &c.

In which respect, some devout persons have very needlessly, not to say superstitiously, perplexed themselves; and have been entangled in an apprehension, of a greater necessity than really there is, of a long and solemn preparation every time they receive the Sacrament.

It is true, taking the word preparation for that which I called internal preparation, namely, inward holiness and conformity to the divine nature: in this sense it is impossible for any man to be worthily and sufficiently prepared. For our graces are imperfect, as well as our knowledge. As we know but in part, so we are sanctified but in part. And perhaps there was never any man so worthily prepared, but there was still some defect or other in the disposition of his mind, and the degree of his preparation.

But now taking the word preparation for external preparation,

For “the sequestering of ourselves from secular business and diversion; and the spending a certain portion of time in fasting and prayer, in self-examination, &c.

In-

In this sense, the same degree of preparation is not always either necessary in itself, nor expected by Almighty God.

1. It is not necessary in itself.

For since a holy life is the truest and justest preparation for this Sacrament, we may safely infer, that those pious persons who are regular in the main of their conversation, and who dare not sleep in the guilt of any known sin; but are careful every night to call themselves to an account for the actions of the preceding day: I say, those prudent and pious persons, when they prepare for the holy Communion, do not need that tedious elaborate examination, which yet may be necessary for careless, extravagant sinners.

When a man's accounts are often reviewed and considered, they are very easily made up and adjusted (as we phrase it) on any solemn occasion. But when the particulars of an account are confused, and have been long neglected, it requires a much longer time to finish such an entangled reckoning, to methodize and put it into order.

The case is the same in spirituals as in temporals; and it is easy for you to make the application. But,

2. As the same degree of preparation is not equally necessary to all sorts of persons, so neither is it expected by Almighty God.

As

As Almighty God is a very kind and gracious, so he is a most just and equal Being. As he doth expect a service and an homage from us, so he always considers the different capacities and circumstances of his creatures: "To whom much is given, of them shall much be required."

Those whose condition is easy and prosperous, and who have convenient leisure for visits and diversions, of these doubtless God expects a larger portion of time, and a more elaborate preparation.

But as for those who are of a meaner condition, who either sweat for their daily bread, or at least are constrained personally to attend the concerns of their families; doubtless, of these God will accept a shorter time of retirement and devotion than he will from others.

THESE things premised, I now proceed more particularly to inform you what kind of PREPARATION is necessary in order to the worthy receiving of this holy SACRAMENT.

WHEN God's minister hath given you notice, that on such a day will be administered the most comfortable Sacrament of the body and blood of Christ; then, being returned from the Church, immediately retire to your prayers. And therein make an affectionate, humble acknowledgment of the divine divine wisdom and goodness in the great work of man's Redemption. Or, in the words of the exhortation at the communion, "Give

 " most humble and hearty thanks to God
 " the Father, God the Son, and God the " Holy Ghost, for the Redemption of the " world by the Death and Passion of our
 " Saviour Christ."

And then you must set apart some time in the following week for self-examination. Wherein, as your leisure and circumstances will admit, you are "diligently to try and
 " examine yourselves, before you presume to
 " eat of that bread and drink of that cup."

Concerning which examination, much has been said in our manuals of Devotion. But because the rules there given, though otherwise piously designed, are sometimes intricate and perplexing, and have raised unnecessary scruples in the minds of devout, but weak and superstitious People; I shall therefore in all plainness give you my thoughts in this matter.

There are two things which all persons are to examine before they receive the Sacrament;

1. Their KNOWLEDGE.

2. Their PRACTICE.

If you are young communicants, and have never yet received, then you are to examine,

I. Your

I. Your Knowledge. You are to examine, Whether you know and understand the nature of this Sacrament. Or in St Paul's language, whether you discern the Lord's Body; that is, Do you know the reason why the sacred Elements are consecrated and set apart? Why the bread is broken, and the wine poured out? Do you understand, that this is not done as at a common meal; that the bread is not eaten, nor the wine drank, only for nourishment and refreshing of your bodies; but that the breaking and eating of the bread, doth signify and represent the breaking and crucifying of Christ's Body; and the pouring out of the wine, the shedding of his Blood? And that by this holy Institution, of thus eating and drinking, are not only signified and represented, but also sealed and confirmed, all those benefits and blessings which are the effects and consequents of his Death and Passion.

Do you apprehend, that this Sacramental eating and drinking, is not only a commemoration of the death of Christ, for the redemption of mankind; but also, that it is an evidence of God's reconciliation and favour to us? That our sins are pardoned? That we are in league and amity with him? That we are his friends and favourites? and as such, are admitted to his own Table, to eat of his bread, and drink of his cup?

B

And

And do you farther understand, that this Sacramental eating and drinking is a means and instrument of conveying grace and strength, and the assistance of the Holy Spirit to the souls of worthy receivers?

If you know thus much, (which is very plain and intelligible) you need not perplex yourselves about your Knowledge. But being satisfied in that, you may then proceed,

2. To the examination of your Practice.

Wherein you are fully and familiarly instructed in your Church Catechism; in the last question and answer; thus,

“ Q. What is required of them who come to the Lord’s Supper?

“ A. To examine themselves, whether they “ repent them truly of their former sins;
 “ stedfastly purposing to lead a new life;
 “ have a lively faith in God’s mercy through “ Christ, with a thankful remembrance of “ his death; and be in charity with all
 “ men.”

From which answer you may observe, that the worthy Communicant examines himself in these four particulars: 1. His Repentance.
 2. Faith. 3. Thankfulness. 4. Charity.

1. Repentance is a necessary qualification for the due receiving of this holy Sacrament:
 for

for without repentance there is no hope of pardon, or forgiveness of your sins. And it is the very design of this Sacrament, to procure, to convey, and to give assurance of such pardon.

Now the most plain and intelligible account of repentance (and which the meanest capacity may understand) is this :

When a man is convinced that he hath committed a fault, and hath done something amiss, and is then sorry for it ; is ashamed, and grieved, and troubled that he hath done it, and doth heartily wish it had not been done ; and for the future doth not only resolve, but also doth actually amend and reform, so as never more to commit the like : such a man, we truly say, doth repent of such an action.

Thus therefore examine whether your repentance is true or no.

Being retired from the hurry and business of the world, examine your hearts and consider your ways. Call to mind the several passages of your lives ; and then thus say and resolve.

“ I have indeed thus and thus offended
 “ God ; at such a time, in such a manner,
 “ and on such an occasion (—here confess
 “ your several sins) but I am heartily sorry
 “ for what I have done. I am perfectly “ ashamed that I have thus affronted so gra“ cious a God : such a kind and merciful “ Father. And if it were to do again, I “ would

“ would not do it. I have formerly done
 “ very much amiss; but I now stedfastly
 “ purpose to lead a new life.”

If you can heartily and sincerely thus say and resolve, you do then truly repent.

2. Examine your Faith, “Whether you have a lively faith in God’s mercy through Christ.”

Faith in general, is the giving credit to a thing; or the taking it to be true, upon the testimony or authority of such persons as declare it. And therefore divine faith is the taking or acknowledging a thing to be true, because God hath told us that it is so.

From hence you may easily apprehend,
 “What it is to have a lively Faith in God’s mercy through Christ.” It is in short this:

It is to be firmly persuaded, that if we are duly qualified for the divine favour, that God will then be gracious and merciful to us for the sake of Jesus Christ.

Now, what it is that will thus qualify for God’s mercy and acceptance, I have already explained, viz.

If you repent you truly of your former sins; stedfastly purposing to lead a new life,
 you ought then firmly to believe this truth;
 That God will pardon those sins, and will be merciful to you for the sake of Jesus Christ.

This is that full trust in God’s mercy, that quiet conscience, which the exhortation of the Church

Church tells you is so necessary, that without this no man shall presume to come to the holy Communion.

Now the reason why you ought to have this full trust in God, this lively faith in his mercy through Christ; is because God, who is immutably true and faithful, hath declared, and plainly told you in his holy word, that those who truly and sincerely repent, they shall certainly have pardon and acceptance. And therefore to doubt of this, and to distrust God's Mercy; to say or think,

“ My sins are so great and provoking,
“ that though I do repent, though I am sorry
“ for my former sins, though I mourn for “ my sins, and though I resolve for the fu“ ture to forsake my sins, yet God will not
“ pardon me; God will not accept me:”

Such a distrust as this is directly contrary to a lively faith. It is the highest affront to the merit and satisfaction of our blessed Saviour (who, by his death upon the cross, hath made a full, perfect, sufficient sacrifice and oblation for the sins of the whole world:) It is the greatest indignity not only to the divine goodness (whose mercy is over all his works) but also to his veracity and truth.

You will believe an honest man upon his word. Do not therefore dare to distrust a faithful God; but say, “ Lord, I believe;
“ help thou my unbelief.” I do firmly believe, I am fully persuaded, that if I truly

“repent, and forsake my sins, God will be “merciful to me for the sake of Jesus Christ.”

3. Examine “whether you have a thankful remembrance of his death.”

This thankful remembrance of the death of Christ, is so necessarily required of the worthy communicant, that it is the very end and design of his coming to the Lord’s Table.

In the Exhortation at the communion we are admonished;

“That these holy mysteries are ordained,
“to the end that we should always remem“ber the exceeding great love of our Master
“and only Saviour Jesus Christ, thus dying
“for us.”

And indeed, without this remembrance, eating of bread and drinking of wine, would be barely a natural action, but not a sacramental institution.

It is then indispensibly required of all those who come to the Lord’s Supper, to remember the death of Christ.

But how are they to remember it? Not only historically, to recollect by way of story, that such a passage did happen at such or such a time. This doubtless is not sufficient, since not only the worst and vilest of men, but even the very Devils, (those knowing, sagacious spirits) do thus remember it: they know and remember (though indeed to their terror) that seventeen hundred and odd years ago, Jesus of Nazareth died upon the cross.
and

The remembrance then which is required to make us worthy communicants, is a thankful remembrance. That is, we are so to remember our blessed Saviour, as to be sensibly affected with those benefits and blessings we receive by his death.

When therefore you approach the Lord's Table, thus thankfully remember the death of Christ.

“ I Give most humble and hearty thanks
 “ to thee, O God the Father, the Son,
 “ and the Holy Ghost, for the redemption
 “ of the world by the death and passion of “ our Saviour Christ, both God and man,
 “ who did humble himself even to the death
 “ upon the cross for us miserable sinners, “ who lay in darkness, and the shadow of “ death, that he might make us the children
 “ of God, and exalt us to everlasting life.”

“ To thee, therefore, O blessed Saviour,
 “ with the Father and the Holy Ghost, I
 “ will give (as I am most bounden) conti“ nual thanks. I submit myself wholly to “ thy holy will and pleasure, and will study
 “ to serve thee in true holiness and righteouf-“ ness all the days of my life.”

4. Examine “whether you are in charity with all men?”

To be in charity with all men, is to be kindly affectionate towards all men; doing them all the good you can, giving and forgiving, as far as your capacity and their circumstances will admit.

Particularly (as the Church doth instruct you) “If you shall perceive your offences to be such as are not only against God, but also against your neighbours, then ye shall reconcile yourselves unto them, being ready to make restitution and satisfaction, according to the uttermost of your power, for all injuries and wrongs done by you to any other. And being likewise ready to forgive others that have offended you, as you would have forgiveness of your offences at God’s hand.”

And when the minister gives warning of a communion, he then declares; “That if any be in malice, or envy, or in any other grievous crime, that they repent of their sins, or come not to that holy Table.”

From this prudent caution of our Church, several pious well-meaning people do make this.

O B J E C T I O N.

“I Have received such provocations from such and such persons, that I cannot easily put them out of my mind. And
2. “whilst

“ whilst I remember such unkindness, I cannot but think worse of those from whom I have received such injuries. And this occasions me to keep a greater distance from them in conversation; not to be so free and familiar with them as formerly. Much less can I think it prudent, to treat them as particular friends and confidants, by reposing trust in them; or bestowing particular favours upon them. And therefore I doubt I do not love them; I am not in charity with them; and consequently, that I am not prepared for the holy communion.” This is indeed a very popular objection; which I hope to remove in the following

A N S W E R.

TH E R E is a twofold love;

1. A love of complacency or friendship; which disposeth us to desire and to delight in the conversation of others.

2. A love of benevolence or compassion; which prompts us to desire and endeavour the benefit of others.

The love of complacency, or friendship, is not due to all men. For the Gospel, which commands you to be harmless as doves, doth likewise require you to be wise as serpents.

Now

Now it is no instance of prudence to take a snake into your bosom, and to treat your enemy as a friend. Or to converse chearfully, and with freedom, and to communicate your secrets to him, who is false to your interest, and who takes all occasions to slander and affront you, and, were it in his power, designs your ruin.

Since therefore it is morally impossible to take delight in the conversation of a captious designing person; and since it is not prudent to make a false injurious man your friend, you may safely infer you are not obliged to love such an enemy with this love of complacency and friendship.

But besides this love of complacency and friendship, there is a love of benevolence or good-will, which prompts you to desire and endeavour the welfare of all men.

By this love of benevolence, you are obliged to be just to all mankind, and consequently to your very enemies. You must be faithful to them in all your promises, true and sincere in all your speeches, just and punctual in all your dealings. Nor must you pretend, that you have the freedom to falsify and tell lies, to raise calumnies, or report false and slanderous stories, even of an enemy; neither may you wrongfully withhold what is due to him, by breaking your promise; nor may you oppress or defraud him.

And as the love of christians thinketh no evil, so it inclines you to be doing good.

As

As you must not abuse your enemy with lies and slanderous stories, so, when occasion is offered, you must give him his just commendation ; and when it may be for his advantage, must give him a good character, must represent him as fairly as his Case will admit. As you must not wrong and injure your enemy by cozenage and fraud (much less by open force, violently detaining what is his) so christian love doth oblige you to do him right. To help and assist him when he is oppressed, and to relieve him when he is in want. ^{ss} If thy enemy be hungry, give ^{ss} him bread to eat ; and if he be thirsty, give ^{ss} him water to drink. For thou shalt heap ^{ss} coals of fire upon his head^{ss} (to melt him down by kindness) ^{ss} and the Lord shall reward thee,^{ss} Prov. xxv. 21, 22.

Thus by a love of benevolence and complacency, you are obliged to be in charity with all Men. ^{ss} Forgive, nay, love your Enemies : ^{ss} Bless them that curse you ; do good to them ^{ss} that hate you ; and pray for them that ^{ss} spitefully use you, and persecute you.^{ss}

F I N I S.

BOOKS Printed for and Sold by
J. RIVINGTON, at the Bible and Crown,
No. 62. in St Paul's Church-yard, London.

THE Life of God in the Soul of Man: or, the Nature and Excellency of the Christian Religion, with the Methods of attaining the Happiness it proposes: Also an Account of the Beginnings and Advances of a Spiritual Life. With a Preface by GILBERT BURNET, late Lord Bishop of Sarum. The Eighth Edition, corrected. Price 1s. 6d.

Bp KIDDER's Young Man's Duty; shewing the Necessity of seeking the Lord betimes; as also the Danger and Unreasonableness of trusting to a late, or Death-bed Repentance. Designed especially for Young Persons, before they are debauched by evil Company or evil Habits: With Prayers for their Use. The Ninth Edition, pr. 9d.

A Seasonable Caveat against Popery; or an Essay on the Merchandise of Slaves and Souls of Men; Rev. xviii. 13. with an Application thereof to the Church of Rome: pr. 6d.

The Christian Scholar: In Rules and Directions for Children and Youth, sent to English Schools. Especially designed for the Poor Boys taught and cloathed by Charity. By WHITE KENNET, D. D. Late Lord Bishop of Peterborough. The Eleventh Edition. pr. 3d or 20s an Hundred.

Questions and Answers concerning the Two Religions, viz. That of the Church of England, and the other of the Church of Rome. A new Edit. pr. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

A Discourse concerning a Death-bed Repentance. By WILLIAM ASSHETON, D. D. Rector of Beckenham in Kent. The Sixth Edition, 12mo. Pr. 6d. bound, or 5s. a Dozen.

ASSHETON's Exhortation to the Holy Communion, with the Nature and Measure of Preparation for it; fitted to the meanest Capacities. Pr. 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. or 10s. a Hundred.

